TABLE TOP AND CROSSBAR

WOOD VENEER

Only the high-quality trunks and therefore the smallest part of the total felling can be used for the furniture construction. That applies to the use of the trunk for veneer production, too. The choice of wood is done selectively according to the requests typical for furniture.

In contrast to solid wood veneered surfaces are less sensitive to variabilities of temperature and dampness. Veneered surfaces are protected. This makes the care especially easy and exerts the beauty of the material.

The veneered table top and the cross bar are optionally available in:

- Beech (UV laminated with oil effect): With older trees a reddening of the wood inside the trunk arises as a natural corollary, named core. This core is characterized by a beautiful, bright colouring and unique growth marks.

- Wild oak natural and wild oak bianco (UV laminated with oil effect): Visual characteristics of wild oak are increased arising branches, small cracks, whirls or face sides. The agility of the wood is also formed by the natural play of colours.

- Wild walnut (UV laminated with oil effect): With wild walnut the wide colour spectrum is varying from grey-brown to red-brown painting to the point of nearly black inlets. Also a share of light sap wood is possible. Limb and growth marks as well as different intense wood structures are characterizing the nativeness of the walnut.
